

I think that large media corporations should not be given any more leighway in regards to being able to own more stations and companies. This is contradictory to the spirit of healthy, competitive capitalism and to democracy. The United States is a wonderful country in part because of the abundant freedom of choice for the average citizen. By giving big media even more control, the American citizen's freedom of choice concerning information sources--which are of the utmost importance--is drastically compromised.